Senator Birkholz, who has restored the presentation of the White Pine Award for Environmental Excellence said, “It is a pleasure to work with such dedicated young people who show so much enthusiasm in conserving our precious resources.”

The tribute and the Award recognized the Michigan 4-H Youth Development Program and the 4-H Youth Conservation Council for their efforts to promote environmental education and environmental stewardship in and around Michigan. The group also testified before the Senate Natural Resources and Environmental Affairs Committee at its afternoon meeting.

The Michigan Youth Development Program provides educational opportunities that target age appropriate life skill development, emphasizes research-based experiential learning, involves volunteers and families and promotes a multi-cultural perspective. The mission of the program is to create non-formal, fun, educational opportunities to help youth thrive in a complex and changing world.

The Michigan 4-H Youth Conservation Council is a group of 25 selected youth between the ages of 13-19, representing all six of the Michigan State University Extension regions. This state-wide teen leadership council selects a conservation issue, researches the topic, develops oral and written presentations, and then makes a recommendations to one of the standing committees of the State Senate or House of Representatives that handle issues pertaining to natural resources and the environment. This year the council researched the topic of small petroleum spills in the inland lakes, rivers and the Great Lakes, a problem affecting Michigan’s resources.

The White Pine Award for Environmental Excellence, which began over 10 years ago, recognizes an individual or a group of individuals who have made a consistent, enduring commitment in helping to protect Michigan’s environment. Senator Birkholz has restored this recognition program begun by then Senate Majority Leader Dick Posthumus to honor the actions of Michigan citizens who promote a wise conservation ethic in the state.
